

repacked, is food allergen labeling sufficient on such intermediate products or is it necessary to have clearer labeling on intermediate products to ensure that food allergens are appropriately declared on the retail packaging of the final product?

3. Should the agency codify its policy to specifically state that incidental additives that are food allergens are not exempt from labeling and must be declared in the ingredient statement on the label?

III. Summary

FDA's public meeting, scheduled for August 13, 2001, is intended to help the agency determine what additional actions may be warranted to provide consumers with adequate food allergen information on product labels. FDA recognizes that there are additional food allergen areas that may need to be addressed at future meetings or through agency actions, e.g., food handling practices and providing food allergen information in restaurant settings. However, at this time, the agency is focusing on issues relating to labeling and manufacturing of the eight most common food allergens; therefore, the public meeting will be restricted to discussion of the topic areas described above.
